The east side contains on the first floor the Museums of Geology, Gynæcology, and Physiology, and the Women-Students' Recreation Rooms. The ground-floor contains the Chemical Department, the Men's Reading-room, and the large Greek Hall.

The Anatomical School, with the new wing added in 1911, is situated in the north-west corner of the grounds.

A new block of buildings, opened in 1914, contains in the front the Schools of Civil and Electrical Engineering, and in the side wing the Department of Pathology, the Biological Laboratories, and the Mathematical Lecture-room.

The College grounds are extensively planted with many varieties of ornamental shrubs and trees, and a large portion of the western side forms a Botanical Garden.

The College Union Buildings are close to the College on a site acquired in 1914, beside the River Corrib.

THE LIBRARY.

The foundation of the Library dates from the opening of the College in 1849. Its first Librarian was the well-known archæologist, James Hardiman, the author of the "History of Galway." It contains an extensive and valuable collection of books and journals, to which constant additions of the most recent standard works are made out of a yearly grant of £415 given by the Governing Body.

The Library is over 150 feet in length, extending along the first floor of the north side of the College, and contains a large hall where accommodation is provided for readers, a reading-room for the Professors, and a private room for the Librarian.

The number of volumes amounts to about 60,000.

The Library Catalogue (Supplemented by a Card-Index Catalogue) is divided into nineteen departments. The authors are given in each department in alphabetical order, with numerous cross-references. The large collection of journals, both English and foreign, is particularly valuable for research students, as they contain numerous important articles on special subjects.

A most interesting manuscript in the possession of the Library is the collection of the ancient Corporation books of the City of Galway, dating from the year 1486, the first year of its incorporation, up to the beginning of the nineteenth century.

It also contains a map (of which only two copies are extant) made in 1651, by order of the Marquis of Clanricarde, to illustrate the extent and importance of the town. A poetical description in Latin reminds us of the former splendour of Galway—

> "Bis urbis septem defendunt moenia turres > Intus, et ex duro est marmore quaeque domus."

The Library is open to Members of the College and to others living in the province of Connacht, on conditions set forth in the Library regulations, a copy of which will be sent to intending borrowers on application to the Librarian of the College.

THE LABORATORIES AND MUSEUMS.

Chemistry Laboratory.

The students are instructed in the facts of chemistry and their theoretical meaning by means of lectures with experimental illustrations, and they are taught to acquire skill in pursuing it, or in applying it, by laboratory work, in which each student works independently under the supervision of the professor or his assistants. Advanced students are required to refer to the standard journals which contain the original records of the progress of the science, and which are kept at hand in the departmental library. For this latter purpose it is important that those who desire to pursue chemistry as a special subject should be able to read the German and French languages.

Students in the Faculties of Arts may take chemistry as a subject of their first year, while those of medicine and engineering are required to devote one year to its study. Students of agriculture work at chemistry throughout their College course. Students of the Faculty of Science, if they elect chemistry as a subject for the B.Sc. Degree, devote three years to its pursuit. After this they may proceed with the science for the M.Sc. and for the D.Sc. Degrees.

At the present time, when public attention is being directed to the importance of chemistry in its application to the country's manufactures, and when it is probable that a demand far greater than that of former years will arise for chemists trained in research, it may be useful to point out some of the advantages that this College affords for such training. The College offers at intervals a valuable post-Graduate scholarship in chemistry, and the Royal Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 offer to the College every two years a Science Research Travelling Scholarship, of £150, tenable for one, two, or three years, and also certain Bursaries. For the Scholarship the usual requirement is proof of research of sufficient merit, actually accomplished. Six of the students of the College have held this Scholarship in Chemistry.

James Hardiman Library, NUI Galway

Another inducement is the possibility of obtaining the D.Sc. Degree now given by the University for published original work. This is open either to students of the University who have taken their primary degrees in Science, Arts, Medicine, or Engineering, or to students of other universities who engage in the pursuit of original inquiries in the College. The College is also a recognized place of training for the Institute of Chemistry, the Associateship or Fellowship of which is now practically an essential requirement for public chemistry appointments, or for manufacturing positions. The A.I.C. or F.I.C. is now the recognized qualification for professional chemists.

Physics Laboratory.

The Department of Physics is well suited for the purpose which it serves in Galway College, that is, to provide a thorough training in the principles of Physics for medical, engineering, and agricultural students, and an opportunity for students of Science to pursue a course of study leading to the degrees of B.Sc., M.Sc., and D.Sc. There is a large collection of physical apparatus suitable for Practical Physics classes and for purposes of illustration in the various lecture courses.

There are a lecture theatre, two laboratories, and a workshop. The department is supplied with electricity from the town mains, both for lighting and experimental purposes.

In addition to work in Experimental Physics, lectures are given both to elementary and advanced students in the several branches of Mathematical Physics.

Natural History Laboratory and Museum.

The general courses of practical instruction in Botany and Zoology are conducted in the newly erected laboratory for elementary and advanced Biology, which provides ample and fully-lighted working space for upwards of twenty-five students. The benches are suitably supplied with sinks, water-taps, and gas connections, and furnished with students' lockers. A chemical bench, a demonstration table, a large preserving trough, and a Wardian case also form part of the equipment. Each worker is provided with an efficient compound microscope.

The adjacent laboratory for Honours students and those engaged in research work is designed to facilitate biological operations entailing the use of special apparatus or instruments of precision. Equipped with sliding and rocking microtomes and embedding baths, all the ordinary methods of plant and animal histology can be employed. For the carrying out of experiments in Plant Physiology an incubator, fume cupboard, chemical bench, and inserted slate slabs are provided, together with a spectroscope, klinostat, auxanometer, and other necessary apparatus.

The Museum of Natural History is well provided with specimens of typical forms of the various classes of the animal kingdom, its most striking feature being the extensive osteological collection. A series of models illustrating certain aspects of plant and animal anatomy and embryology are also displayed. Suitable tables and window benches are provided at which the material can be examined.

The Biological Lecture Theatre is situated in the Museum, and is well lighted from above.

In the grounds of the College the more important natural orders of flowering plants are represented, and ample space is available for experimental plant-breeding.

Geology Laboratory.

The Department of Geology is now adequately equipped for work of a high university standard. The practical side is strongly developed, and the laboratory and museum offer great advantages in this direction.

The former is fitted for any branch of the work in which more than a mere acquaintance with the specimens is necessary—for the study of crystallography, for microscopic work, for the chemical examination of minerals, and for the examination of geological maps and charts. Like the museum, it is open at all times to students of Geology who wish to devote extra time to this subject.

The geological museum contains a collection of such scientific value as students are rarely fortunate enough to have provided, unless the larger national collections are within easy access. Occupying a prominent place is the collection of local exhibits, which contains some exceptionally good specimens of minerals, rocks, and fossils from the surrounding district.

The collection of minerals contains every well-known species, and numerous rare ones, the minerals of economic value, especially the metallic ores, being the most strongly represented. This section is supplemented with a collection of rocks of all types and ages gathered from all over Europe.

The palaeontological section contains a valuable collection of the typical fossils characteristic of the successive geological periods. Worthy of note among them are the collections of fossil plants from the Coal Measures, of Ammonites from the Liassic rocks, and of the rather rare Permian fossils described by the late Professor King (the founder of the museum) in his monograph in the publications of the Palaeontographical Society. In addition to the commoner fossils are numerous remains of fossil fishes, and almost complete skeletons of the extinct sea-reptiles, Ichthyosaurus and Plesiosaurus (the latter attaining a length of about eight feet), and casts of the skulls of various other large extinct reptiles and mammals.

The department is also supplied with an elaborate electric lantern, fitted for ordinary use, and for throwing microscopic and polariscopic slides directly upon the screen. This is fitted up in the museum.

It would be impossible to leave this department without noticing the facilities which it offers for post-Graduate work. Very little of the geology of the district is yet conclusively decided or worked out in detail, whilst large parts of it still remain, to a greater or less extent, a geological puzzle. The maps of, and literature on, the district, as far as they go, are available within the department, but further work on the geology of western Connacht is greatly needed. Field excursions are arranged for the ordinary classes, but more advanced work, by the students especially, is much to be desired. The laboratory is fully equipped for the following up of this field work, and every assistance given in the production of the resulting thesis.

The results of the work of the Geological Surveys of Ireland, Scotland, England, and Wales are received as soon as they are published, and the library is supplied with the newest works on Geology as they appear, as well as with the usual geological journals and magazines, so that the department is kept intimately in touch with the great progress which this science is making.

Practical Anatomy Rooms.

These include the usual arrangements for an anatomical establishment, and are placed in a separate building in the College grounds. There are included—

(a) Lecture-room.

(b) A dissecting-room, rebuilt within the last few years.

(c) A new museum building, just completed, containing a large collection of permanent anatomical preparations, human and comparative, a good collection of casts and models (Auzouz of Paris; Ziegler of Freiburg: His of Leipsic) at the disposal of members of the class for supplementing their dissections. There is a small Anthropology collection (to which additions by old students serving abroad will be much welcomed). There is an X-ray apparatus for observation of bones and other organs in the living model.

Physiology Rooms.

The Physiology rooms include—

(a) An experiment room, where each member of the class has the opportunity of making an experimental study of the phenomena of muscle and nerve, the sense organs, circulation, and respiration.

James Hardiman Library, NUI Galway

Recording-drums, driven by an electric motor, are provided for taking records. Photographic apparatus is in readiness for the same purpose.

For advanced students' work an ultra-microscope is set up in this room. The room contains a small installation for experimental Psychology work.

(b) Histology work. Each student has a working-bench, with a Leitz microscope and reagents for his separate use.

(c) Physiological Chemistry. Working benches are provided for each student for the study of the various organic substances referred to in the lecture course.

Pathology Laboratory.

This Department is situated on the top floor of the new building, and consists of three rooms—a museum, a students' laboratory, and a research laboratory. The whole has just been fitted up in the most up-to-date manner.

The museum, though not large, contains a valuable collection of Morbid Anatomy specimens. These are mounted in Kaiserling's solution in open glass jars, and are thus always at the student's service. Additions are being constantly made to the collection.

The students' laboratory is fitted with benches to seat thirty students at histological work. There are chemical and other benches besides. The fittings include among other appliances electric bench-lamps for use with the microscope. A very fine magic lantern has recently been procured, and there is a large and important collection of lantern slides.

The research laboratory can accommodate at least four workers. It is well lighted, and is well fitted for most kinds of research work. The fittings include an electrically heated incubator, an elaborately driven centrifuge, an ultra-microscope, and histological, bacteriological and chemical appliances of various kinds.

The importance of research work has been kept in mind when planning and fitting this part of the Department. In this department, as in other departments of the College, every opportunity and encouragement are given to suitable advanced students to pursue research.

The ordinary course in Pathology for medical students has recently been arranged in a way that makes it possible to give a thorough exposition of the main principles of Pathology and Bacteriology, followed by an efficient demonstration of their applications and results.

The principles form the subject-matter of the course for the third medical examination, and a special course is given on their applications and results for the final M.B. Every effort is made to make each course full and thorough, apart altogether from the examination point of view. The number of students following these courses is steadily increasing, and there is every prospect that the increase will continue.

The Materia Medica Museum and the Practical Pharmacy Laboratory.

The Materia Medica Museum and the Practical Pharmacy Laboratory are in the main College Buildings under the Library; they adjoin each other, and the students can pass from one to the other during working hours.

The Materia Medica Museum is also the lecture-room: it is fitted up with a complete set of specimen drugs, organic and inorganic, official and non-official, and is most complete and excellent of its kind. These specimens are used to illustrate the professor's lectures, but besides them a set of fresh specimens is supplied annually, which are distributed amongst the students attending the classes of Materia Medica and Practical Pharmacy. Ample opportunity is thus given the class to acquire a sound knowledge of the appearance and physical properties of the pharmacopœial drugs so essential for their examination.

The Practical Pharmacy laboratory has been fitted up in a very complete and convenient manner. Here also there is a collection of drugs, and a complete supply of apparatus necessary for each student to carry on his practical work.

James Hardiman Library, NUI Galway

The course is divided into two parts. The first is conducted on the lines set out by Sir L. Brunton, in the Practical Pharmacy class at St. Bartholomew's Hospital; and in it the students become acquainted with the several pharmaceutical processes—each student performing the several operations, and working out the details for himself, and not merely learning from demonstrations. In this way he acquires a practical knowledge of the numerous and often difficult manipulations necessary for compounding and dispensing pharmacopocial preparations.

When the several lessons in this part have been completed, the student is in a position to undertake the compounding of the various forms of B.P. preparations. The fact of the student being permitted to perform these various operations with his own hands, and not merely learning them from demonatrations, makes his work more interesting, gives him confidence and encourages precision.

The Montgomery Museum.

The Montgomery Museum is attached to the Midwifery and Gynæcology Lecture Room. It was purchased by the Council of the Queen's College—shortly after the opening of that College—from the executors of the late Dr. Montgomery, a well-known obstetrical specialist and writer. It was one of the best collections of its day, and has been added to from time to time by the Professors.

Civil Engineering Laboratory.

The Class-rooms and laboratories are in the new block of buildings, situated in the north-east corner of the grounds.

On the upper floor are well-lighted senior and junior drawing offices, equipped with drawing tables and diagrams, and a photo-print room, with a mercury vapour photo-copying machine.

On the first floor are the class-room and the surveying apparatus store.

The ground-floor contains—(1) a Strength of Materials Laboratory, fitted with a 100,000 lb. multiple-lever testing machine, operated by hydraulic power, with three throw-pump and motor; a 10,000 lb.

James Hardiman Library, NUI Galway

diaphragm testing machine, operated by hand; a lathe for the preparation of specimens: and smaller apparatus for the measurement of deflection, torsion, extension, etc. (2) A cement-testing laboratory, with a complete installation for carrying out the tests on cement in accordance with the specifications of the British Standards Committee.

Electrical Engineering Laboratory.

This department occupies part of the ground floor and first floor of the new building.

The large laboratory and the battery room are on the ground floor, and the lecture room and small laboratory on the first floor.

In the large laboratory there are several modern machines, including a 10 K.W. three-phase revolving field alternator, driven by a variable speed continuous current motor: a 5 B.H.P. three-phase asynchronous motor: three single-phase oil-cooled transformers, 200 to 600 volts; a pair of 8 K.W. continuous current machines with commutation poles, arranged for working either shunt or compound; a 3 B.H.P. continuous current series motor, with reversing controller; and one or two smaller shunt machines.

There are two large working benches fitted with bus bars at different potentials, for testing instruments and general apparatus.

The tables, the motors, and also the lecture-table and small laboratory on the first floor, are supplied from a large battery of 70-200 ampere hour Tudor accumulators, through a double-pole distribution Board, arranged so that any potential difference up to 140 volts can be available at any point.

There is a valuable collection of instruments, both standard and commercial types, which is added to from time to time.

The lecture-room on the first floor has, at present, seating for twenty-four students, but the floor space will allow of considerable extension should this become necessary. The lecture-table is in connexion with the the battery and machines below. There is also a projection lantern.

The small laboratory is for advanced work, and the more delicate apparatus is installed here.

THE GALWAY HOSPITALS.

The Central Hospital of Galway is of modern origin. Up to 1922 there were no hospitals in Galway that could boast of anything but the most meagre of equipment. The amalgamation of Unions gave the fillip to a long contemplated project and the present hospital is the result. Built on the site and from the walls of the old Galway poorhouse, the present hospital is an entirely modern structure. It comprises in all—the general hospital, the Fever Hospital, the Maternity Hospital, and the old Galway Union Infirmary, now renovated and converted into an auxillary extension to the main building. The general building consists of three floors, and on each floor there are two large and three small wards. In all there are six large and eighteen small wards—with six ward kitchens and the appropriate lavatory and bath accommodation. The two operating theatres are on the top floor, are absolutely modern in every respect, and have a magnificent glass roof, together with the appropriate sterilizing outfit, and an anæsthetic room.

The electro-therapeutic department comprises a new X-Ray outfit, a Bergonie Electric chair for the treatment of nervous diseases, a Diathermy outfit, a pantostat, an Ionic Switchboard and an Alpine sun lamp. It is evident that the Galway Hospital can look with well-deserved pride upon this very essential addition that must form a part of all modern institutions.

The pathological department consists of three buildings—a bio-chemical branch, a house wherein are kept guinea-pigs and rabbits for experiment, and the pathological room proper. In all there is a very complete and up-to-date establishment.

The Maternity wing consists of accommodation for eighteen patients, with a fully equipped labour ward and with everything to make it completely independent of the main building. The Fever Hospital is situated furthest back of all the buildings and consists of six male and six female wards. At one time seventy fever patients were treated at the same time in this very well built and prettily situated part of the Central Hospital.

James Hardiman Library, NUI Galway

The total accommodation in the entire hospital is as follows :—

Main building	...	221 beds.
Extension	...	38 ,,
Maternity	...	18 ,,
Fever ...	...	72 ,, 349 beds,

which compares very favourably with any institution in Dublin, Cork or Belfast.

The work of the hospital is carried out by a physician, two surgeons, and an ophthalmologist, throat and nose man, gynæcologist and obstetrician, pathologist, radiologist, and dentist. The hospital is therefore completely independent, and can cater for any type of case.

Lectures are given in clinical medicine or surgery every day during term time, and the students are assured of individual instruction and full opportunity to examine cases themselves.

Two house doctors are appointed every six months, and are fortunate in being certain of a unique experience, inasmuch as they have a far larger number of patients under their charge than they would have in any other institution.

Students attend the hospital for clinical lectures at the beginning of their third year. Particular attention is paid to the examination of cases, the diagnosis and treatment of the numerous and varied conditions met with. They have also available the Woodlands Sanatorium for consumptives, where instruction is given regularly in the diagnosis of this widespread disease. In addition they are given instruction in Obstetrics—so that when they approach their term of residence in a Lying-in Hospital they will have had the rather unusual benefit of a previous practical experience.

The Hospital is but two minutes' walk from the College, and the connection between the two institutions is of necessity a very close one.

The Literary and Debating Society. At its meetings, which take place weekly throughout the Session, the students have ample facilities for the reading of papers and practice in debate. The College Magazine, the "U. C. G.," is published under the auspices of this Society.

The Athletic Union controls all games and sports in the College, and includes the following clubs :—Association Football, Cricket, Gaelic Football, Handball, Hockey, Hurling, Rugby Football, Lawn Tennis. The Union is supported by the subscriptions of the Governing Body, the Professors, and 7s. from each student, paid as part of his College fee.

James Hardiman Library, NUI Galway

The Medical Society.—The aim of the Medical Society is to develop in its members the mental attitude of scientific experimental enquiry into Disease and the prevention or treatment of Disease, as opposed to the empirical attitude attributed usually to the "Medicine Man."

In order to attain this objective, the Society decided at its inaugural meeting that its future meetings would be such as to :—

(1) Cultivate the habit of reading accounts of original investigations in the Basic Sciences (Biology, Physiology and Anatomy) and Clinical Subjects; and of considering critically the methods adopted and conclusions drawn from the facts observed :

and

(2) Encourage the practice of making original investigation.

Accordingly, at the subsequent meetings papers were read on various subjects by student-members and members of the Staff, the reading of each paper being followed by a general discussion.

The immediate effects on the members produced by these meetings appear to be :—

(1) A marked increase of interest in as well as knowledge of their work.

(2) A better appreciation of the importance of the basic sciences in the interpretation and treatment of clinical conditions.

(3) An increasing tendency to make independent and original observations.

The standard of the papers and subsequent discussions was so high that it afforded definite proof of the fact that the members concerned were naturally endowed with the capacity and will to develop into the ideal type of Medical Practitioner: the type whose chief interest in Medicine is intellectual and humane: whose presence in a district is a source of inspiration. The more medical men we have of this type, the more evident it will be that the general culture of our people has reached a high level.

James Hardiman Library, NUI Galway

While it may be yet too soon to claim for the Society complete success in the attainment of its objective, there can be no doubt that its progress during the early years of its existence has been greater than the most sanguine of its founders had expected. There is no reason to believe that the members of the future will be less worthy than those of the early years, and thus the complete success of the Society seems to be assured.

The Engineering Society.—Membership of the above Society is confined exclusively to students of the Engineering Faculty. Professors and lecturers of the faculty are honorary members. The objects of the Society are to discuss matters of interest to Engineering students. Meetings and debates are held regularly during the session.

The Commerce Society.—Membership is confined to Students of the Faculty of Commerce. The object of the Society is to stimulate and encourage interest in current economic problems, etc., by the reading of papers and debates. The Committee is elected annually, and is composed of a Chairman (the Dean of the Faculty of Commerce), a Vice-Chairman, two Secretaries, and five other members (three men and two women).

III.—HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE.

The Colleges of the Queen's University were founded under the provisions of the Act 8 and 9 Victoria, cap. 66, entitled "An Act to enable Her Majesty to endow new Colleges for the Advancement of Learning in Ireland." Under the powers given by this Act, it was determined to found three Colleges. Galway was selected as one of the sites; and on Dec. 30, 1845, Letters Patent were issued incorporating it under the name and style of "THE PRESIDENT, VICE-PRESIDENT, AND PROFESSORS OF QUEEN'S COLLEGE, GALWAY.

The College was opened for Students on October 30, 1849. The Presidents and Vice-Presidents of the three Queen's Colleges constituted a Board of Government till the foundation of the Queen's University in 1850. By the University Education (Ireland) Act, 1879, provision was made for the foundation of the Royal University and the dissolution of the Queen's University within two years from the date of the Charter of the Royal University. All Graduates and Matriculated Students of the Queen's University at the time of dissolution became Graduates and Students of the Royal University, and all existing Professors of the Queen's Colleges continued to be University Professors. The Charter of the Royal University was granted on April 27, 1880, and the Queen's University was dissolved on February 3, 1882.

By the Irish Universities Act (1908), Queen's College, Galway, became a Constituent College of the National University. A new Charter for the College was issued on the 20th December, 1908. In accordance with the provisions of this Charter, Statutes A, B, I. and II., were made by the Commissioners appointed under the Irish Universities Act, 1908, and Statutes III. to XVII. were made by the Governing Body of the College.
